THE MEANING OF THE ELECTION

Not All a Republican Victory.

By J. Dallas Bowser.
Blest of God, the God of Nations,
Hail! Columbia, Hail to thee!
Let the lips of happy millions
Sound the notes of Jubilee.
Northern breezes, waft the anthem!
South winds blowing, swell the strain!
While the Rockies catch the echo,
Sending back the glad refrain.
One in heart, with voices blending,
North and South, your tribute raise!
Sound aloud the mighty chorus!
Shout! O shout Columbia's praise!

The recent Republican victory was more than a Waterloo. It was an avalanche, wherein the ice-fettered mountains of a quasi-monarchical dynasty had tumbled into the sea. For the administration of President Wilson had been that of an imperial sovereign with hereditary tendencies.

But while the Republican party may justly claim the brilliant victory of November 2, it should not "lay the flattering unction to its soul," that it supplied all the ammunition that destroyed the rock-ribbed bastille of the Democratic party. History records that when a people want a change of government they forget their partisan affiliations and at once become allies of a political revolution. While Napoleon Bonaparte, as Emperor of the French, was climbing the Alps and adding to his freshly won victories at Lodi and the Pyramids of Jena and Austerlitz the French people hailed him as another Alexander the Great looking for yet other worlds to conquer: while England, Prussia and Germany looked on aghast and trembled at what he should do next. But when he buried the bulk of his great army amid the snows of Russia, the Western world took courage, and with Wellington and Blucher overwhelmed him at Waterloo and sent him to die in solitude upon the lovely isle of St. Helena.

So, in the United States in 1856, Fremont, the first Republican candidate for president, was beaten by half a million Democratic ballots. Four years later the half million Democrats had been converted to good Republicans and gave their votes to Abraham Lincoln. It was the Nation's first mighty uprising against the slave power.

Eight years ago Woodrow Wilson owed his election to a split in the Republican party since the combined votes of Taft, Roosevelt and the other candidates exceeded him by nearly two and a half million votes. Four years ago the tide had again turned and the more than a million of disaffected Republican votes were given to President Wilson in the hope and belief that he would "keep us out of the war."

In this year of grace 1920 it was remembered by overcredulous Democrats and recalcitrant Republicans that he neither kept us out of the war nor succeeded in formulating a constructive peace protocol which would make future wars impossible. Thus Republicans, Democrats, Prohibitionists, Socialists and the Farm-Labor party all instinctively rallied about the Republican standard bearer. And the result would have been the same kind, though differing in degree, no matter whom the Republicans might have nominated, nor what the working of the platform. It is a veritable Republican year and there was never a show for the Democrats to win.

Locally, the campaign had its variations. First of all the massive G. O. P. elephant as he went through the canyons and jungles of the boggy ridden North Side and its Jackson County environs, carried its tail with it, its huge feet contributing to the general crush.

The residence wards, non-partisan in determination, brought up the reserves, so for a term of years the reign of graft, protected vice and ballot stuffing is at an end. The average Negro Democrat stood aloof from the stampede of white Democrats to the anti-boss thousands. He evinced small concern for the salvation of the Nation or the redemption of his down trodden race from Southern violence and outrage. While the revival was on it was his golden opportunity to fall into line with the millions whose banner had as its motto "All men up and no man down."
